A PAPER DEVOTED TO THE BEST INTERESTS

OF MENLO PARK AND SAN MATEO COUNTY

No. 29

VOLUME 7

MENLO PARK, SAN MATEO COUNTY, CALIFORNIA, FRIDAY, MAY 16, 1930

Recorder Mascot Takes Two Prizes

Little Gerald O. Bradley, grandson of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Harris and son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar A. Bradley of the Menlo Park Recorder was the lucky winner of two prizes today in the baby show and parade given by the sponsors of the Fiesta de las Rosas at San Jose.

Gerald, who is better known as "Jerry" by practically all of the residents of Menlo Park, and who is loved by all for his bright and cheerful disposition, took a third place in the physical examination for boys under three years of age, after passing the examinations conducted in the ball room of the Hotel St. James immediately following the parade, with an "O. K." in each particular point.

In the parade which took place at two o'clock his float took second prize in the unique vehicle class. The float, built by his parents and uncle and aunt, represented a throne or an open jewel box and the little man, clad in red silk pants, yellow jacket and black sash, sat on his throne with all the dignity of a king. Moving picture of the float were made as well as pictures for the San Jose Mercury-Herald.

The young man, who is two years and three months old is receiving the congratulations of his many friends on his good luck.

RAILROAD CREWS TO AID IN FIRE PREVENTION WORK

Engineers and firemen of the Southern Pacific Company, ever on watch for the appearance of danger, are preparing to go into action again as unofficial lookouts in the West's annual campaign against the devastating "fire demon."

With the approach of the dry summer season, bringing increased fire hazards, the railroad's engineers and trainmen have been asked to keep a sharp lookout for fires along the company's 9,130 miles of Pacific Lines, it was announced today.

The importance of curbing the fire menace by observing and reporting blazes before they get beyond control on forest and farm lands is impressed upon Southern Pacific's great force of workers in a bulletin just issued by F. L. Burckhalter, general manager of the railroad.

TELEPHONE COMPANY REDUCES EUROPEAN RATES

In a general rate reduction, involving all transatlantic telephone conversations between North America and Europe, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, on May 10, lowered the rate on each call by $15 for the first three minutes and $5 for each additional minute. The reduction was made effective at 8:00 P. M. on Saturday to enable all transatlantic telephone calls on Mother's Day to be charged at the low rates, according to A. G. Wild, local manager for the telephone company.

On the basis of last year's transatlantic telephone messages, the reduction will mean a saving to the public using the service of approximately $450,000 a year. For the entire year of 1929, transatlantic telephone conversations averaged about fifty per business day.

Under the revised schedule, the basic rate for a telephone call between New York and London will be cut a third, from $45 to $30 for the first three minutes. Between San Francisco and Paris, the rate will be lowered from $60.75 to $45.75; San Francisco and Berlin, from $62.25 to $47.25; San Francisco and Rome, from $63 to $48; San Francisco and Madrid, from $63 to $48; San Francisco and Stockholm, from $63.75 to $48.75. Rates to other European points have been cut proportionately.

Saturday's reduction is the second since transatlantic telephone service was opened three years ago. The cost of telephoning between North America and Europe is now less than half of the original charge.

Chief among the factors enabling the American Telephone and Telegraph Company to put the new reduction into effect is the increased usage of service. In 1928 the average calls a day increased 357 per cent over 1927. Last year the increase was about 60 per cent over 1928.

A submarine telephone cable is planned to be completed in 1932, extending from Newfoundland to Ireland. It will supplement the present radio telephone services to Europe, furnishing additional voice and telegraph channels which by that time will be needed to handle the expected increase in overseas message traffic.

JAMES S. JAMES CANDIDATE FOR COUNTY SURVEYOR

Burlingame, Calif.
May 15, 1930.

To the Citizens of San Mateo County:

I desire to publicly announce my intention to become a candidate for the office of County Surveyor at the coming August Primary Election.

There appears to be a very definite conviction on the part of many citizens of San Mateo County that certain changes could be made in the administration of the office of County Surveyor which would be to the advantage of the citizens and taxpayers. My belief that the viewpoint of these citizens is founded on fact induces me to take this step.

It is fitting and proper therefore, for me to set forth the principles which would govern my administration of the office of County Surveyor should I be chosen to fill that office:

1. The same business principles which govern the conduct of the Engineering Department of any business organization will govern my administration of the County Surveyor's office.

2. The office of County Surveyor will be conducted strictly for the benefit of the stockholders of the County (taxpayers and citizens) by the most modern methods and in the most economical manner consistent with first class work.

3. Although the County Surveyor is permitted to do private engineering work, I do not think it proper to do such work in or from County offices. I would therefore entirely segregate private work from County engineering and confine the use of County offices strictly to County business. It seems to me that the amount of surveying and engineering work now being done by the County should require the entire time of the County Surveyor.

4. All responsible contractors and material men will be given equal opportunity to bid upon contracts and to furnish materials for County improvements in so far as such matters come within my jurisdiction.

5. The private engineering work in San Mateo County should be more equally divided among Engineers qualified and equipped to handle such work. All Engineers practicing in San Mateo County will have an equal opportunity in any private work coming under my supervision or jurisdiction.

The above statements constitute my "platform." They are not intended in any way as a reflection on any County official or his administration.

I am asking the support of all voters in the County who believe with me that the principles above stated, if applied to the office of County Surveyor, would result in distinct benefit to San Mateo County and its people.

Respectfully submitted,
James S. James.

SURPRISE PARTY GIVEN J. S. ABREU FRIDAY NIGHT

On Friday evening last, a delightful surprise was tendered Mr. J. S. Abreu, local inventor of the Satefy Airplanes, on the occasion of his birthday.

The house was beautifully decorated, with many rare roses and spring blossoms, and a model of one of the planes, built by Mr. Abreu, acted as a centerpiece, surrounded by a wreath of crimson roses, with candelabras and appropriate place cards, completed the table decorations.

Upon entering the house, Mr. Abreu was greeted with birthday congratulations, and presented with a beautiful bouquet of hot-house roses. After a toast was drunk, to the future prosperity success of the Abreu Safety Airways Co., Ltd., the dinner was served at the conclusion of which, Mr. Abreu gave an after dinner speech, on the future possibilities of his inventions.

Among those present were, Mr. and Mrs. A. Burdick of Palo Alto, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Abreu Junior, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. M. Matteson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Moreno, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Abreu Sr. and Master Philip Abreu.

Engineer Asks $2711 Paving Survey Work

Menlo Park's city council was confronted with a serious problem today following the presentation last night of a $2711.01 bill by City Engineer George A. Kneese for services rendered in connection with preliminary details of proposed paving in the Stanford Park district. The paving proposition as brought up six months ago was defeated in April, when three new councilmen were put in office by a heavy vote, the street work issue being the main point in the balloting.

Kneese, who is also San Mateo county surveyor, is said to have told Mayor M. H. Weeden that the entire bill would be cancelled if he is retained as city engineer. The council took an indignant attitude when this was told at last night's meeting, and Councilman Eugene Crane attempted to have a resolution drawn declaring the office of city engineer vacant. Other board members, seeing the possibility of a lawsuit over the bill, delayed the action because of the unsteadiness of the city treasury.

Until the next regular meeting, May 27, the auditing committee, composed of Mayor Weeden and Councilmen Alfred Anderson and Crane, will delve into the situation and attempt to reach some amicable solution with Kneese.

Kneese's county office term expires this year. At present he has not had any candidacy filed against him.

PRESBYTERIAN YOUNG PEOPLE WILL GIVE FINE PROGRAM WEDNESDAY

The young people of the Presbyterian Church will offer the public an interesting entertainment on next Wednesday evening, May 21, the chief feature of the program being a clever 2 act play entitled "Kating Jimmy." Many humorous situations growing out of a fondness for a candy and chocolate parlor on the part of the students of a girls college, a handsome young man being retarded by pay the bills of a young lady, jealousy, tears, etc., make a play that will be very entertaining. Those taking part in the cast are the misses Evelyn Wild, June Acord, Dorothy Bassett, Esther Bearce, Tamaki Nao, Jennie Jacobson, Helen Aabel, Sarah Marie Chapman, and Mr. Everett Mullins. Miss Cecile Wathen is Prompter, Mr. Harold Wild and Mr. Fred Johnson are property and stage managers.

In addition to the play there will be a program of music and readings as follows: Orchestra selections; Ladies' Trio; Monologue by Sarah Marie Chapman; Cornet Solo by Mr. Everett Mullins; Vocal Solo by Miss Lula May Chapman. The entertainment will be held in the new Social Hall and the door fee will be 35c and 20c.

A very happy occasion was enjoyed by a group of 17 mothers who gathered at the church on Wednesday afternoon at the invitation of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society to hear a "Mothers' Day Program" put on by that organization. There were 24 of the members present and the program they put on was very interesting and enjoyable. Refreshments were served by the children after the program.

Forty Men Out For Spring Football Practice

Spring football practice for the fall eleven started on the Oak Trust Monday. Forty aspirants for berths turned out and went through light exercises to limber up stiff muscles.

The spring practice will consist of learning fundamentals to be followed later by running plays.

Complete Backfield Lost
The hardest job for coach Dud DeGroot will be to find another backfield combination. Graduation and transfer took every back from last year's squad.

Menlo's hopes in this field lie in four new men. Chancellor, University of Nevada back; McLachlan, Paly Hi and Oregon State; Gunn, all-city full from Lowell; and Hopper and Will of the Menlo high school are the only bright spots on the dark backfield horizon.

Other New Men
To last year's light but strong line are added Burke and McCool, lettermen from San Mateo high; Holstrom, star tackle from Paly; Nash, Prager, Fleishacker, Simpson and Von Saltza from the Menlo high school.

Point Blank

(By Lawrence Campbell)
GOVERNOR C. C. YOUNG SHOULD BE RE-ELECTED

Publicly announcing his candidacy for re-election as governor of California, C. C. Young has asked voters to allow him to complete his program of material and humanitarian progress. His administration of state affairs has been efficient and effective. He has helped promote the Boulder Dam project, enlisted Hoover's aid in solving the state's water problems, urged the conservation of fish and game, parks and playgrounds, and natural resources.

He has promoted the social welfare by measures for the improvement of prisons, the enforcement of safety rules, reduction of industrial deaths, legislation for war veterans, the support of a progressive educational program. These are but a few items of progress.

His stand on prohibition and law enforcement indicate his moral leadership. Let Young finish the job. Elect Young Governor of California.

ROLMER MIGHT VISIT CITY PRISONS

While the bland mayor of the city by the Golden Gate is scurrying to and fro by airplane to persuade Californians to elect him Governor he might well spend a little time visiting San Francisco's prison in Ingleside. His attention to the city's prisons does not qualify him to carry on the work of Governor C. C. Young, who has provided for a separate women's prison, and a prison for youthful offenders. California does not care to duplicate Ohio's experience in prison fires.

SOMEBODY'S EARS WILL TINGLE

So said Senator Hiram Johnson when he learned that his office in Washington, D. C. had been ransacked. This seems to have been his chief purpose since going to the capital. If you were to list the projects he has 'opposed since entering the Senate you will find that he has been against about everything but the Boulder Dam. At one time he was designated as a progressive, but along with Borah, Norris, Nye, and the rest, he has become one of the chief reactionaries of the Senate. He has opposed every president, Democrat or Republican, since he became a Senator. Yes, Johnson may make ear's tingle, but what else has he done in the last ten years?

CHINA AND INDIA SHOULD GO TO WAR

With almost half the world's population involved in the strife in India and China, we might suggest that the two nations fight each other for a change. We have observed the constant revolutions in China with a feeling that the present independent India would be much like the present independent China, a chess board for rival war lords, opportunists, and visionary reformers. Without an educated population you cannot expect to establish a real democracy. Self-determination in such countries is more likely to lead to self-extinction.

ROBERT'S CONFIRMATION DEPENDS ON PROHIBITION

That Owen J. Robert's chance to become a member depends on his attitude toward the Eighteenth Amendment seems evident. If his record is satisfactory his nomination will probably be confirmed. If it is not, he will go the way of Parker. It is unfortunate that men like Kenyon, Davis, and Cardozo cannot be called to the Supreme Court, but it appears that the senators will insist on having men of their own grade of intelligence appointed to the nation's bench.

ALL'S WELL IN CALIFORNIA

While tornadoes lash the Southwest, while snow falls in Santa Fe, while heavy rains bring on the menace of floods, Californians are enjoying their unequalled climate. Census returns indicate that more and more people are coming to the state to share that same climate. Californians frequently are attracted to other states and nations to enjoy seasonal climate, study strange environments, or visit their less fortunate relatives and friends, but Californians always return. Probably about all we can ask for in the way of weather in heaven is that it will be like California in springtime.

ROGER REYNOLDS GIVES DINNER FOR THE EXCHANGE CLUB

Roger Reynolds, prominent member of the Menlo Park Exchange Club, and local nurseryman, gave a dinner for the members of the Exchange club and entertained the full membership, at his home on the highway.

Judge David Patrick, the new city judge, was taken into the club as its youngest member in point of time.

A very pleasant evening was spent in discussions, speeches and a real social hour was had, the guests when departing voting that Roger was an excellent host.

Bids for four highway units representing a cost of more than $200,000 has been opened by the State Department of Public Works at Sacramento. These projects were: Grading twelve miles, Colusa County, R. G. Le Tourneau of Stockton, low bidder at $139,266; paving one mile, San Diego County, Matich Brothers of Elsinore, low bidder at $38,118; grading eight miles in Colusa County, Frederickson & Watson Construction Company of Oakland, low bidder at $58,269; timber bridge, Monterey County, Dean Construction Company of Berkeley, low bidder at $24,246.

An answer to the condemnation suit recently filed by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company for right of way across the property of E. O. Sylvester has been placed on file at Sonora. Sylvester alleges that he has already suffered $14,000 damages through cutting of 142 valuable living trees. The company seeks a right of way thirty-two feet wide, extending from the Mono road northeasterly to Lyons Dam, for the construction of a high voltage line. Sylvester states that the tract has been surveyed and platted for homes and resorts, and the power line would greatly mar its scenic beauty.

Organization of peach growers not affiliated with any of the co-operatives or with the California Canning Peach Growers' Association was being discussed at Marysville, following a meeting of growers. The possibility of obtaining federal farm aid support for members of such a unit features the discussion of the project. Charles A. Wetmore of San Francisco is one of a committee appointed by J. M. Cremin to go into the matter of the new peach organization.

A pamphlet describing a series of experiments in soils for the use of students of agriculture in secondary schools has just been distributed to the high schools of the State by Julian McPhee, chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Education at Sacramento. It is by Dr. Alfred Smith of the University of California and Fred W. Flint of the Turlock High School. The pamphlet outlines forty-three simple experiments and is designed to develop interest among the students in the soil and its functions.

"In plain blunt words, Bill, your pipe smells like a 'Hot-Box'!"

A new pipe, or an old one carefully broken in with Sir Walter Raleigh's favorite smoking mixture, changes everything. And why shouldn't it? Sir Walter is milder and more fragrant. And it has the body and flavor found only in the finest of Burley, skillfully seasoned and blended. What more could we offer any pipe smoker? What more could he ask?

How to Take
(Hint No. 5) It's not true that a pipe makes a hot smoke. A heavy cake makes a hot smoke. A cake is necessary, but in a pipe, as in a car, too much carbon makes heavy, hot going. Our Peninsula Ten Years Hence

That the population of northern California will show another great increase is inevitable. The question arises as to whether our growth in transportation and communication, in education and government, in health and sanitation, in business and industry, in commerce and shipping, will parallel the growth in population.

In ten years the coast highway, the Sky-line boulevard, the Camino Real, and the Bayshore highway will all probably be as crowded as the Camino Real is today. Even if smaller automobiles become the style there will be more and more of them. Commuters will rely more and more upon fast electric trains up and down the peninsula. A four track system will be necessary. A line down the coast will be needed. Airplane taxi service will be on a paying basis.

The public and private schools will be more diversified by 1940. Menlo Junior College, for example, will have become a well established four year institution with five hundred students or more. The superior private school will increase in popularity. The larger towns will have their own Junior Colleges. Stanford University will be in the midst of a city.

Municipal management in San Francisco should have solved the problems of transportation by the use of an elevated or subway system, bay bridges, and wider streets. The salt water barrier, the hog farms, the crowded prisons, all these and other problems should have been settled. Adequate attention to problems of water supply, garbage disposal, etc., will have been necessary.

If San Mateo County still has a separate government it is hoped that a new county charter will have been established, for it is needed almost as much as a new state constitution. With the growth of population the attention to health conditions will have been necessary. The conservation of the natural beauty of the hills from fire and vandalism will become imperative.

The bay region and peninsula offer many opportunities for business with South America, the Orient, and Alaska. In ten years there will be many factories established in this region. More and more ships will pass through the Golden Gate to scatter over the Seven Seas.

But if all this growth is to be worthwhile it must be carefully planned. The co-ordination of the plans of city and county governments, of public and private school authorities, of chambers of commerce and other organizations to promote business will be necessary. In fact a peninsula planning commission would seem necessary. We want to grow larger, but we also want to grow in greatness.

The track season came to a close last Saturday when the Menlo team copped a second place in the California Coast Conference meet held at Sacramento.

The team should be highly commended for its splendid work throughout the season, losing only one dual meet. That was lost to San Jose State, which is a large four year college.

The score was San Jose 87, Menlo 35.

Members of the team who deserve special commendation are Captain "Bud" Davenport, Miller, Deacon, Tod Stark, McFederation, Hromadka, Johnson, Phelps and McComb.

The following are the scores of the dual meets:

On Wednesday evening, May 14th, at eight o'clock, choral section of the Redwood City Women's Club will give a concert at the club house on Clinton Street under the direction of Hazel Bobb Hoberger with Velma Van Duyen at the piano. PRYOR DISCUSSES PLANS FOR MENLO SUMMER SESSION

DEAN SAYS LONG VACATION
PERIOD IS NOT NECESSITY

The summer vacation idea originated in America before the patriotic days, according to Mr. Pryor, Dean of the High School, on being interviewed. The tradition has continued down to the present day, with a few changes.

A good many leading educators recognize that not only is a long vacation period not a necessity, but that it is a distinct handicap to the advancement of education, stated the Dean. The next decade will probably witness the extension of the school year and school week. The Menlo summer session is distinctly different from that of other schools in this locality of the country, said Mr. Pryor. During the nine weeks that compose the session, the class work is done in the morning, while the afternoon is devoted to swimming, and other recreational activities held in the pool enclosure and the adjoining gymnasium.

Several places in the Santa Cruz mountains are being inspected with a view to their use as possible camp site for week-end and longer trips to be taken during the session, according to Mr. Pryor. Most of the week-end trips will start Friday at noon and end Saturday night, thus leaving Sunday available for those who have family plans. Several longer trips, involving 3 or 4 days, will be taken to the High Sierra mountains or other well known camping spots.

With the aid of Mr. De Groot and Mr. Carlson the summer session promises to be a huge success, concluded Mr. Pryor.

MENLOAK CINDER TEAM ENDS YEAR IN SECOND PLACE

TOD, MILLER AND HROMADKA
TAKE FIRST PLACES FOR OAKS

Modesto junior college won the annual California Coast Conference track title at Sacramento last Saturday by scoring 67 1-4 points. Menlo junior college with 38 1-4 points took second, while San Mateo followed with 15 points.

Other scores were: Sacramento junior college, 11; Marin junior college 10 3-4; Santa Rosa junior college 9; California Polytechnic, 2 3-4; Yuba County junior college, 0.

Miller Breaks Record
Miller of Menlo broke the old pole vaulting record of 12 feet 2 inches, by vaulting 13 feet 2 1-4 inches. High point honors went to Holman, Modesto, who scored 14 3-4 points.

Tod and Hromadka, Menlo, and Powell, Modesto, tied for second high point honors. Tod won the discus with a throw of 130 feet 6 inches and took a second in the shot while Hromadka outclassed Jackson, Modesto, in the high hurdles and had to be content with a second in the low hurdles. Powell ran a fast century in 9.7 seconds and placed second in the 220 yard dash.

"In the Next Room" Postponed to June 6

That the High School play "In the Next Room" scheduled for May 17 has been postponed was revealed by Glenn A. Russ, director of high school dramatics.

The date has been changed to June 6. Inasmuch as the Junior Operetta at Stanford university is also to be held on May 17, the administration thought it best to postpone the play and thus give Menlo Alumni a chance to attend the university production. Meanwhile rehearsals are going on at full speed and Mr. Russ expects his cast to be more than ready when the curtain goes up.

Joan Wheeler as the heroine and Randal Cockburn as the reporter lead the members of the cast. The scenery, costumes and make up are all complete and all the play lacks is the final polish.

HOME LABOR SAVED

WITH the advent and national distribution of canned foods much time and labor was saved for the housewife. The peeling or seeding of vegetables and fruits, and the skinning and cleaning of fish and chicken became a thing of the past, so far as canned foods were concerned, and the housewife was also spared the necessity of standing over a hot stove for long periods.

But all of her problems were not solved. For generations well-informed mothers have prepared, with great labor, vegetable purées to supplement the milk diet of their babies after six months of age; hospital staffs have spent weary hours preparing the smooth diets of puréed vegetables which modern medicine recommends in the treatment of gastro-intestinal diseases; and hostesses have exhausted themselves and their servants in preparing the delicious soups and soufflés made of puréed vegetables and fruits which they wanted to serve for the delectation of their guests.

A New Era Dawns

Now the necessity for all that labor in the home has been eliminated. The manufacturers of a widely advertised and nationally distributed brand of foods, well-known to all housewives, have put on the market small cans of puréed vegetables and fruits, with all the labor of preparation performed in the factories, and nothing left for the housewife to do but open the can.

This assortment of puréed foods includes peas; tomatoes; spinach; carrots with puréed tomatoes; cereal flour and beef broth added; mixed vegetables with beef broth; prunes; and apricots. The cans of mixed vegetables contain puréed carrots, peas, spinach, tomatoes, celery, lima beans, corn and beef broth. These products are packed in 6-ounce and 10 1/2-ounce cans, and have already proved their popularity. They may be merely heated and used as vegetable side dishes, or to thicken soups, or simply made into timbales.

A Splendid Product

No mother should adopt a diet for a baby, or sufferer from gastro-intestinal disorders select a diet, without consulting a physician. The fresh vegetables used for these purées provide the required range of vitamin values, and include some with beef broth and cereal flour, providing a desirable variety for infant feeding, and insuring an adequate diet, but the baby's doctor should be consulted for quantities in feedings, and for rotation of the various purées, and his advice should be especially sought as to the relative amount of the purées containing beef broth.

The vitamin values and food constituents so important in fresh vegetables are conserved in these puréed vegetables to an extent not possible in home kitchens where the cooking is done in open vessels exposed to oxygen.

Some Succulent Soups

The tale of this new product would not be complete without some of the following tested recipes which have been evolved for its use.

Pea Soup: Combine one 6-ounce can puréed peas, one-fourth cup evaporated milk, three-fourths cup water, two teaspoons butter and one-half teaspoon salt. Heat to boiling, beat well and serve hot. Serves two to three.

French Spinach Soup: Mix together the contents of one 10 1/2-ounce can puréed spinach and one 6-ounce can of evaporated milk, two and one-fourth cups water, and one tablespoon butter. Heat to boiling. Stir a little of the mixture into one egg yolk. Combine mixtures, heat well, heat to boiling and add three-fourths teaspoon salt. Serves five to six.

Cream of Carrot Soup: Heat to boiling in separate pans the contents of a 10 1/2-ounce can puréed carrots, and one 6-ounce can evaporated milk diluted with two and one-fourth cups of water. Beat the carrots into the milk, and add one tablespoon butter and three-fourths teaspoon salt. Serves five to six.

A "Whole Meal" Supper Soup: Put the contents of a 10 1/2-ounce can puréed mixed vegetables, six tablespoons evaporated milk, one cup and two tablespoons water, two teaspoons butter and three-fourths teaspoon salt into a saucepan. Mix well and heat to boiling. Serves two to three.

To Make Timbales

To make Timbales from any of these puréed vegetables, add one beaten egg, a pinch of salt and one teaspoon of melted butter to one can, 6 ounces, of any one of them, and mix thoroughly.

Bake in buttered timbale molds in a slow oven (325° F.) for twenty minutes or until a knife blade comes out clean when inserted. Serve with any of the following sauces: mushroom, cream, cheese or egg. Serves three.*

THE STORY

Renewing a childhood attachment, Ernestine Briceland, of a wealthy family, is attracted by Will Todd, newspaper artist. Her sister, Lillian, urges her to break off the affair, but Ernestine refuses. The love-making progresses rapidly and Ernestine consents to marry Will.

"They'll think I've persuaded you. They'll think I want the money, that I'm seeking for myself," he protested. "If I thought you could live on what I make—but you don't know anything about money. You don't know how hard it is for two people—living on twenty-five dollars a week. I don't know what to do, but I want to do what's right."

He looked most forlorn sitting there, thinking, pondering, trying to contemplate a future without her, trying to reconcile his own pride and self-esteem with the position her family put him into.

"I should never have kissed you," he exclaimed. "I should never have loved you."

"Will," said Ernestine tenderly, "you couldn't help that."

For now his sad confusion had caught her in the grip of her first passion. Now she lived in terrible fulfillment the promise her throbbing heart had made weeks ago, when she had talked to Lillian about marriage. Her heart leaped in her like a thing threatened with mortal danger. She flung herself upon him precipitously, her arms strained round his neck. He caught her and held her close. All his being flared up in answer to her own emotion, and his lips sprang to hers in a kiss that was as new to them as though they had never touched each other before. It was a promise.

"Take me today, Will," she cried, and tears streamed down her face. "Now, quickly, before anybody can say a word to us, before they can be reasonable and reassuring and competent about us. Take me and hold me, now, quickly and secretly. I promise you I'll live on what you earn. I promise I'll take my chance with you—completely. I'll never let them have reason to say that you wanted anything but me. Whatever you have is all I'll have, Will. I promise—"

She was crying wildly. He was shaking, as she was, but he laughed a little, and wiped her cheeks with his own clean handkerchief.

"The lady promises, Judge," he said, and kissed her and laughed at her and teased her. "The lady promises never to sue me for more than a million a year alimony. The lady promises—"

He picked her up and set her on her feet.

"Come on, then—let's do it now," he cried, and seized her wrist and ran, pulling her along.

It was almost evening when Will and Ernestine came to the Briceland house. In the downstairs drawing room the lamps glowed softly. She had telephoned mamma that she was in town for lunch and would come out with Will at five. Beyond Lillian, Ernestine could see Loring's square shoulders.

They ran up the steps, hand in hand, and at the door Will gave her a reassuring hug and kissed her cheek.

"Let me do the talking," he whispered, and they went on into the hall and ran into the drawing and living room. Ernestine was aware at once that the swift kiss Will had imprinted on her cheek had been seen, for papa was flustered and hostile, and mamma looked at her in pale reproach.

"Mamma," said Ernestine, "do you remember Will Todd?"

Mamma gave Will her hand, and he moved awkwardly forward, looking shabby and ill at ease beside the magnificence and self-possession of papa and Loring.

"We've just been talking about you," mamma said to Will. "I didn't know until yesterday that you were such friends with my little girl. I'm sorry you haven't been here sooner."

Will murmured something, and Ernestine introduced him to her grandmother, who looked at him severely and gave a slight snort of recognition, and then Lillian came and offered him her hand and said she remembered him. The two men straddling the hearth acknowledged the introduction with silent handshakes. Mamma asked Will to sit down and rang for tea. Ernestine, full of guilt, sat down close beside him and turned to speak to mamma.

The conversation moved haltingly as they waited for tea. Papa, somewhat maliciously, asked Will about his father.

"He's well," Will answered in a calm natural voice. "But my mother has been almost an invalid for a year now. We feel very anxious about her."

"We are sorry to learn that," said mamma, and then went on quickly: "What have you two children been doing all day?"

There was a dramatic pause, but Ernestine took it up quickly.

"Mamma, you forget that I am twenty now."

They laughed politely. The tea-wagon came, mamma poured tea for them all, and they talked of things about which Will knew nothing. Ernestine could see how they were making him feel like an outsider. Sitting in the deep chair, his long legs drawn up before him, Will was not so disturbing. Her heart was full of tender loyalty.

"You have changed a great deal," mamma said to Will. "You used to be a shy little boy."

"I don't feel very shy today," he told her, and smiled at Ernestine.

His bright black eyes, like shiny bits of anthracite, under his white, dome-like forehead, were beautiful, but Ernestine knew that the others could see nothing but his queer clothes.

"Tell them, Will," she said at last, putting down her cup and taking his from him.

They all stopped, and turned startled faces toward the two. Will squared himself and turned first to mamma.

"We've gone and done it," he said, smiling.

"Gone and done what?" asked mamma sharply, and her pallor started them all.

"We've gone and got married—today."

"Married! Who?"

It was papa's voice, harsh, protesting.

"Ernestine and I," answered Will steadily, and Loring said, "Married!" in a hoarse, incredulous tone, and Ernestine, looking up, saw his face, as pale as mamma's, and as startled, with deep chagrin and consternation written on it. But none of the others noticed him.

"You see," said Ernestine gently, "we were engaged anyhow, and when mamma invited Will to tea, today, I thought we might just as well make it an announcement party."

"You thought!"

"Certainly, papa. It was my idea."

"Not at all," said Will quickly. "But anyhow, we are married. I know this strikes you suddenly, sir, but we just decided in haste, and as we want nothing but your blessing—"

"Be still!" exclaimed papa passionately, and he turned to Ernestine. "Where were you married? By whom?"

Will took the conversation into his own hands with deliberation.

"We went to town about noon, went to the courthouse and got our license, then to a jeweler and bought the ring and waited while it was engraved," Ernestine held up her slim hand, and showed the astonishing gold band on her third finger. "Then we took a taxi out to my mother's house, got her and went to the church I was reared in, in Avondale, and were married."

"But why this mad haste?" spluttered papa, who was almost incoherent. "Ernestine," turning to his daughter, in renewed determination to have nothing to do with Will, "what's got into you? I am sure you have been under some dreadful influence. I can't understand how you could act this way. I can't believe it."

He was furious, he was undone, but he still had a note of command in his voice. Ernestine felt his strength with terror.

"Papa—," she began, but Will cut in resolutely, so that in spite of papa's determination to talk to Ernestine the situation narrowed itself constantly to papa and Will.

"Ernestine was afraid, sir, that you might try to separate us. My own instinct in the matter was that we should talk this over with you, but I see, now, that she was right. You must understand, sir, that we are married, and your objections are futile."

"Ernestine had reason to fear me," papa said in a voice none of them had ever heard from him before. Ernestine felt herself shiver under it. Papa had no intention of considering himself futile.

"She had reason to fear me, and so had you. I suspect your fear was more important than her own. Even if she were a fool, you might have been decent about it. I have no intention whatever of letting her go away from here with you. You'll learn, sir, that there are such things as annulments, even as divorce. Just because she has made one foolish mistake, is no reason why I should let her ruin her whole life. You have behaved very badly, but your behavior ends here and now. Ernestine stays here. You may go, and I will deal with you outside the house."

Ernestine felt that everything was lost, but Will only laughed. If papa were new and strange, so was her young husband, for he seemed to glow, to fill out, to be bigger and stronger.

"Don't be silly," he said. "Ernestine is of age. She married me of her own free will, and if you tried any such stunts, she would say so. Our marriage is entirely legal. It stands before everything else. She is now my wife, and my home is her home, and you can't detain her."

"We'll see," said papa grimly, and then mamma broke in.

"You shouldn't have, Ernestine. You shouldn't have run off and got married, without telling mamma. It's the biggest, the most important thing in your life—and to take such a step without your people knowing it! I can't bear to think you'd go off and be married—and not tell me."

"I'm sorry, mamma," said Ernestine in distress, and papa took things up again. He had made a decision.

"Go to your room, Ernestine," he said in a voice of stern command, "and stay there until I can talk to you. If you ladies will excuse us, we will settle this among ourselves. Do you hear me?" he said sharply, turning his furious eyes upon Ernestine. She faltered, half turned to go in automatic command, for papa had always ruled his home, without much effort, but Will put his hand on her arm.

"Stay here, Ernestine," he said in a low voice, and she paused, undecided, while mamma and Lillian seemed to be grouped together on the other side of the room.

"I can understand your distress, sir," said Will. "I can see just how you feel about this, not knowing me at all and not understanding my motives. But you exceed your authority. If you should detain Ernestine here by force, I have only to go out and get the nearest policeman and come back for her. You can't do it."

There was a moment of incredulous silence, and papa half turned to Loring, in appeal, and Loring said in a low tone, "He's right."

Will followed this advantage swiftly. "After all, what have you against me, except you think I may want Ernestine's money? We have decided to do without that. I'm not a stranger to you. You've known my father for thirty years. You know my people, that they are honorable and decent. There's no reason at all why I shouldn't make any marriage I choose, even with Ernestine. I'm working. I can take care of her."

Papa raised his clenched fist above his head, as though he would strike Will, and Ernestine made a little moan and mamma screamed. But Loring put his hand on papa's arm, and drew him back. And in that moment Lillian went to Ernestine and put her arms around her and kissed her.

"Oh, Lill!" Ernestine cried, and burst into terrible tears. "Papa, papa," she cried, turning from Lillian to her father, and holding out her hands, "don't quarrel with us. I can't bear it. I love Will. I wanted to marry him. Let us go ahead with our own married life, now, but don't quarrel with us."

"It's you who have broken faith," said papa. "Not your mother and I. You've put this stranger before us. You can't have both."

Ernestine was appalled. "You mean that I can't come home?" Papa attained a grim smile.

"That's what I mean," he said, but now mamma broke in hysterically.

"I won't be separated from Ernestine. I won't permit it," she cried, and went to her younger daughter and took her in her arms. "Darling, you can come home as long as mamma lives here. I will see you every day. It's dreadful. It's hard on all of us, and it will be terrible for you. But mamma will not let her little girl go away like this."

"Elaine!" said papa, but she turned to him, as full of anger as he.

"The child is married," she exclaimed. "She may have made a mistake, but if she has, it is only a reason for standing by her. This is my home, as well as yours. I won't be instructed to let my little girl go out friendless. You may do what you like with me, and send me away, too, if you can, but I am going to see Ernestine. I am going to have her here."

Of course papa was helpless, and he said so with a shrug.

"Mamma," said Ernestine, "I am willing to take the responsibility for my marriage. After all, it's I who married Will."

"Not you alone," said mamma vigorously. "The whole family has married him, and we may as well realize it. For nobody marries just one of the Bricelands. We are all going to stand together, always. Papa, we will have to make the best of it. The marriage will have to stand."

Papa would not look at her, nor answer.

"We'll have to go," said Will.

"Goodby, darling," said mamma, and embraced her. "I'll see you soon."

"Goodby, papa," Ernestine faltered, but papa held his stubborn attitude.

"I'll have to go upstairs and get some things," murmured Ernestine, as they went into the hall.

Lillian went upstairs with Ernestine. Mamma came out and put her hand on Will's arm.

"Be good to her," she implored

"If you can't take care of her, if she's not happy, let her come back."

"I will, Mrs. Briceland," he said soberly. "I appreciate what you have done."

Mamma wept afresh. "It is hard for her father. He worships her. You must understand him. It is a terrible blow to him. He will come around."

The girls came down the stairs, and after a moment Ernestine and Will were out in the dark street again, with her small dressing case in Will's hands. The family stood about in the living room in stricken silence.

The silence lasted for some moments, then Mrs. Briceland turned to her husband.

"You should never have let her go off like that," she said reproachfully. "What will she do?"

"I had no intention of letting her go, if you hadn't interfered," he exclaimed. "I was only threatening her with the loss of the family, in order to get her to stay here—to gain a little time."

"She wouldn't have done it," said Lillian. "She's too crazy about him. It probably was her idea that they get married first. She meant it. You couldn't have kept her."

"How much do you suppose he earns, on the Sun?" asked mamma, and Loring answered:

"Probably anywhere from twenty-five to forty dollars a week."

At that papa threw up his hands in a gesture of despair and turned to leave the room, but he looked back at his wife darkly.

"If you had stood by me," he said to her, "if we had all stood together, we could have held her here. You went back on me, both you and Lillian. It gave them courage. Now, you can think of her, God knows where, with that upstairs." He went into the hall, and mamma followed him, her bright persistent voice coming down the stairs.

"You shouldn't have let them go. We might have kept them both here, and taken care of them. Lewis, you'll have to make up your mind to give in, and get him a better job—"

The voices trailed off, and an upstairs door closed upon them. Grandmother went stiffly out of the room, Lillian began to move about the room, satisfying her need for order by pushing the chairs in place, straightening the pillows and moving the things on the table. Loring stood by the fire, staring into it, his face flushed, one hand opening and closing nervously.

Lillian came and spoke to him in a voice which was already like mamma's. "I'm sorry you got into this," she said. "It's terrible. How can Ernestine act that way? She's the most haphazard thing. But this is the worst yet. I feel as though she had ruined herself. But you aren't going to be angry with her, are you, Loring?"

"No," he said. "No, I won't be angry with her. Your mother's right. The family must stand by her."

Lillian shuddered a little.

"It seems dreadful to me," she said. "Ernestine out somewhere in Chicago, with that man. I don't see how she can be crazy about him in the first place, and how she could have married him in the second."

Loring reached out his hand and ran his fingers down the crepe sleeve of her dress, caught her fingers and held them in his own.

"Would you do that much," he asked wistfully, "if you cared for a man? Would you defy everything for him?"

"I don't know," said Lillian honestly. "I don't know. I want things nice. I want some plan and arrangement to my life."

"But if the man you cared for was not eligible," he persisted, "would you marry him anyhow?"

"It's not a fair question," protested Lillian, and then added softly: "I don't know what I would do. Because I've cared for only one man, and he has been eligible in every way. So I can't imagine how I would act under other circumstances."

There was a little silence, and then he said, in a stilled voice:

"Is it I, Lillian?"

She looked up at him, and his face was full of suffering. Her own was compassionate.

"Did you care for Ernestine, Loring?"

Defy Passing Years by Right Way of Thinking

But why look old? That, says some one, is all nonsense. But is it? They do say we are as old as we feel. And that's about the truth of it. Of course, we change as time passes. That must be admitted. Yet the change need not be at so rapid a rate.

Even then, we ought to show the change very much less than we do. You know the gentle shock we sometimes get when we run across a person we haven't seen for years. There's a definite, a marked change in him. It depresses us; because our thoughts immediately turn to ourselves.

Many grow old, as we all know, long before their years. The face is a remarkable index to the mind. If there is a lack of faith, or control, sure enough we shall show it in our eyes, our lines, the poise of our head —even our hands. Many people add to the diseases of the mind such other things as gloom, discontent, pessimism, fear.

Beauty, we are always told, is only skin deep. Beauty—real beauty—is soul deep. Once we get the right way of thinking, we shall never look old.—London Tit-Bits.

Curse on Contract Breakers
Cases of real-estate purchasers failing to complete the contract under which they bought property were rare in the days of ancient Egypt, Babylon or Assyria, because they dreaded the consequences promised in the contract to the purchaser who would break it. The curse of Nihil, king of heaven and earth; of Siru, the sun god, and of Gula and Adad were but few of the afflictions assured the one who wedged out of a deal. These things were written into the contract, so that there may be no mistaking the importance of the transaction.

Peanut Problem
Notwithstanding the enjoyment over her first bag of peanuts, Nancy Vera, just past three, was experiencing difficulty in breaking the shells of the monster goober with her tiny fingers.

"Muvver," she asked, holding up a big peanut, "will you unbutton this thing for me?"

ing?" she asked him, but he shook himself quickly.

"No, no!" he exclaimed. "Not—that way. I'm fond of her. She's been like a little sister to me, always. But it's you I care for. It's you I want for my wife. Is it possible that you care for me, Lillian?"

"I always have," she answered simply, and he stared down at her, and again his voice was queer and strained. "I'm like Ernestine," he said, "what I want is love."

She put up her fair sweet face, and he kissed her placid lips.

"I love you, Loring," she assured him, and he took her roughly into his arms.

"You hurt me," she complained in a moment, and he released her and stood holding her hand gently.

"I want love," he said again with poignancy, and Lillian assured him in her quick bright voice that she loved him.

CHAPTER III

Strange Country

It seemed a natural thing to Ernestine, however it seemed to the others, to wake on her marriage morning, in the little back bedroom of the tiny house where the Todds had lived all their married life. She was instantly wide awake and oriented. Perhaps it was the close tangle of Will's arms about her that made everything normal. Perhaps the delicious consciousness of new happiness had never entirely been lost in sleep. It did not matter at all about the family now.

Thinking of everything, Ernestine felt in her heart something new about Will. Added to her romantic love for him was something really more wonderful: a sound thing—respect. He had behaved admirably.

She was filled with a transport of tenderness, a strong conviction of having done well. Now, at last, life had begun for her. The chrysalis of girlhood was broken, and she was emerged into womanhood. She had become real. Always now, Will would be here beside her at the beginning of every day. Gravely she considered this, and sent up a wordless prayer that she might be a good wife.

Some one was moving about in the kitchen, and she heard the rattle of coils in the kitchen grate. How close and small the house was. Each sound came through the thin walls distinctly. Ernestine realized that she would have to close the window, and she essayed to rise. But at the first movement Will's arms tightened about her, though he did not waken. Ernestine extricated herself and got up with a swift strong movement.

"You have to work today, Will," she said in such a wifely tone that he laughed and looked up at her adoringly.

"I suppose now I've got somebody even worse than my mother about making me get up," he said, and then added, "Hey, wait, I'll get you some warm water," for Ernestine was washing her face in the basin that stood on a small washstand near the door.

But the water out of the pitcher, which had stood all night with the cold wind blowing through the open window upon it, was cold and invigorating.

Will shaved in the kitchen, and Ernestine could hear his voice, in an affectionate murmur, talking to some one. Before the small wavy mirror, she applied her make-up, looking at herself sharply. She arranged her sleek soft hair, proud of its thickness and texture. What was there in her face? Was she different this morning? She must not be different. She powdered again, and rubbed some of the scarlet oil her lips, which were as red as cherries under the lip salve.

She made the bed neatly and set the room in order, packed up her belongings. The smell of coffee and the sound of the percolator made her feel faint. She had eaten nothing the evening before.

In the kitchen, Will's face turned on her, as bright as a triangular mirror with the sun on it. His mother was sitting by the kitchen table, with a warm shawl over her heavy dress. She could be up at times, and this morning she had made the effort. Ernestine went to Will's mother, and kissed her.

Mrs. Tingley

Los Angeles.—"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription" is the tonic that I found beneficial to myself and child in early motherhood, and I would advise every young mother of today to take it during expectant periods. Junior League's Growth Made in Thirty Years

The nucleus of the present Association of Junior Leagues of America was the Junior League of the New York college settlement, organized by Miss Mary Harriman in 1900. This was followed in 1906 by the founding of a second league in Boston, Baltimore, Brooklyn and Philadelphia having meanwhile joined the ranks, the first general conference was held in 1911. In 1920 the 39 leagues then existing were organized by Mrs. Willard Straight (Dorothy Whitney) into the present association, and six years later a national headquarters was established in New York city, and in the following year an anthology of Junior League poetry was published. In the same year the Bulletin, since 1912 the official organ, was converted into the Junior League Magazine. There were 101 leagues in the United States, representing 39 states, and three additional leagues in Canada in 1928. The same year a national club, with offices and exhibition rooms, was established in New York city.

Trackmen Flood Hotel As Guests Swim Below

FIRE EXTINGUISHER STOPPED ONLY AFTER ADVENT OF FIRE DEPT.

The scream of fire sirens, the howls of aggravated hotel managers, the hiss of water at sixty gallons per minute, and the moans and wails of wet Menlo junior college students, all added to the riotous scene which took place in a dampish room on the fifth floor of the Lenhart Hotel in Sacramento, Saturday night.

As the two youths were enjoying the downpour of water from a shower head, some eight or ten inches above them, their gazes wandered to an automatic fire extinguisher that was quiet in its innocent way, on the bathroom ceiling. "Ahah", thought the children, "We shall have some fun", and fun they had. It was found that heat applied to the sprinkler, would release the water and flood the room. So matches were struck and applied to the nozzle. Nothing happened, but the lead finally gave way and chaos burst forth. A hundred pounds of pressure, sent that water hurtling around the room with no regard whatsoever, for the fixtures, or humans who were by this time to frightened to speak. When they were able to break loose from their tracks, they packed towels around the angry outlet, but to no avail. Still the water poured forth. Seeing that this proved unsuccessful, they dashed into the hall for help which was not at hand. It is impossible to imagine the thoughts that went through the minds of these two super athletes, until the fire department arrived, and shut off the stream.

Sacramento - Menlo Swimmers To Clash

MENLO PREPARED FOR BATTLE

Tomorrow afternoon the combined Menlo junior college and high school swimming team meet the Panther splasers from Sacramento J. C.

Sacramento modestly (?) admitted that they have a strong team and sent a challenge to the locals. Little is known of the Panthers, but Coach Thornton is inclined to think they are not as good as they are rated.

Norton has been working hard with the Oaks all week and tomorrow should see them in top form. Von Saltza, Clumeck, Odom and Benet are capable of points in any meet. The Menlo relay teams are should continue to win.

The riot quelled, an inspection tour then departed to determine exactly how much damage had been done. Five stories below in the lobby, aged inmates were suffering from the first indoor rainfall in twenty years. Donning raincoats and umbrellas, they immediately left the locality in all haste.

Five stories above, the Menlonians had presented a good alibi, and were quite relieved as they found out that the place was covered by insurance.

MENLO WILL COMPLETE YEAR OF PROGRESS IN ALL FIELDS

Students come and students go, but Menlo stays on, not as the same school but each year improving in most details over the previous year. This year has been no exception to the rule. Advancement in scholastic and athletic line has taken place as well as the inception of new building, new equipment. The student body has also grown, being much larger than at any time before.

When students put in their appearance to begin the fall semester, a new dormitory, Administration building and gymnasium were ready for use. Included in the new dormitory which is being used to house junior college students, is the Union and club room. Used for the free hours of the students, the club room have been of great value to the students, encouraging social gatherings, discussions and other means of spending their spare time. The Union sells all the little necessities of a student, such as school and athletic equipment, as well as innumerable toilet articles and other things that a student's union should sell. And in addition to this, the lunch counter furnished a place to go for a bite to eat or drink between classes of after studying. Truly this is one of the most important additions to Menlo's equipment.

The new Administration building houses the offices of the director of Menlo school and junior college, the registrar and the dean of the junior college. It also contains the offices of the secretaries, the files, as well as the library and classrooms and laboratories.

Athletically, this year has indeed advanced over previous years. For the first time in the history of the junior college, a team representing Menlo has won a conference title. This was accomplished by Jack Cosgrove and Robert Rhodes when they won the California Coast Conference tennis title. In football, basketball and track, the teams finished second in the Conference races. In baseball the squad finished third. Admirable showings were made by the swimmers, soccer and water polo teams.

In the high school, although admittedly not so successful as the junior college, an excellent athletic season has been enjoyed. Lack of tryouts for the various sports handicapped the major sport coaches, but admirable showings were made by the teams they turned out. Cub and lightweight teams had successful season, as well as furnished sports for ambitious but smaller boys.

Scholastically the school has gone above previous standards. Carnegie Foundation examinations were given both junior college and high schools for the comparison of these schools with numerous other schools of similar types throughout the country. Numerous other standard examinations have been given, both for personnell records and the students own use. A survey conducted by Stanford university showed that Menlo students are superior to the average in native ability and decidedly so in achievement.

For the first time, a debating team has represented Menlo junior college, meeting such teams as the Stanford Frosh, San Jose State and San Mateo junior college. El R. Blanco has competed in national contests, coming out with favorable rankings and showing improvement over the first volume published during 1928-29. In the high school, interest in dramatics has been increased, and several plays have been produced. The dramatics season will be climaxed by the production of "In the Next Room" on June 6. The 1930 Musketeer will be bigger and better than ever, one of the best year books Menlo has ever seen.
